

Damovo announces support for Microsoft Office
Communications Server 2007 Release 2

Damovo today announced that it has extended its Unified Communications portfolio with the availability of Microsoft Office Communications Server 2007 Release 2 (R2). This new release brings further business benefits with increased productivity, collaboration and cost savings.

Damovo, a global systems integrator with operations spanning 92 countries, has a very strong reputation for supplying and integrating the most innovative communications technologies available. As a Microsoft Gold Certified Partner, Damovo has an excellent understanding of all the features and benefits of Microsoft Office Communications Server 2007.

Damovo's long and successful heritage as a systems integrator ensures it has the expertise to leverage and integrate Office Communications Server 2007 R2 into business communications infrastructures. This is a crucial factor for companies who want to maximise the potential of their existing networks.

"Damovo believes in Microsoft's vision for unified communications and enabling people to find and collaborate with colleagues right from the applications they already know and use," said Betsy Frost Webb, general manager of Microsoft Unified Communications Group at Microsoft Corp. "Their expertise as a systems integrator will enable customers to experience the full benefits of Office Communications Server 2007 Release 2 including significant productivity gains and noticeable cost savings, both of which are paramount in the current economic climate.

Office Communications Server 2007 R2 enhancements include dial-in audio conferencing, desktop sharing, and persistent group chat. It also has enhanced mobility features, allowing users to communicate using presence, IM and voice as an extension of their PBX, from a unified client.*

Mike Parton, CEO Damovo, comments:

"Damovo has invested heavily in Unified Communications. We firmly believe that the solutions we have today from Microsoft can provide huge productivity, efficiency and cost savings gains for our customers. We are already using Office Communications Server and it has transformed the way we communicate and collaborate with each other across our business. This is definitely a solution we can stand over and fully recommend to all of our customers."

Office Communications Server 2007 R2 will launch at a worldwide online event on February 3rd, 2009. Damovo is a Platinum sponsor of this event. To hear more about Damovo's Unified Communications offerings please visit: www.ocsr2launch.com
